THE RETREAT.

Hannibal, one of the world's great generals, won battles and fame by masterly retreats. Cora saw that the crucial battle of her life was directly before her and that this time the good fight lay in retreat.

Her longing to get away from Colony Park for a time grew stronger and stronger. The only obstacle was Wanda. She couldn't leave Wanda, her guest. She would have to wait until Wanda's visit was ended.

An unexpected circumstance, however, came to Cora's aid. Colony Park was to have a pageant celebrating the triumph of coal and iron. The Colony Park people had grown rich on these products of nature, and poetically itched to make a sort of acknowledgment.

Wanda Laurence, at Colony Park's urgent request, was to coach the actors while David Temple designed sets, scenery and costumes. The two were now inevitably together early and late on the preparation of the entertainment. No man and woman ever worked so well and so hard together as they, it seemed. They appeared to have forgotten everything in the world but their pageant and each other, Cora thought.

To be near the scene of the spectacle, Wanda took up her quarters at the Colony Park Inn. And David Temple, the architect, had drawn Wanda and David together years before now, toward into a constructive relation as they worked together on their project.

Their thoughts blended as harmoniously as their separate abilities supplemented each other. Yet David would come home after an afternoon rehearsal looking pale and strained. Cora knew it was the strain of an inner struggle. Wanda, too, looked as a woman looks who is passing through a crisis of the spirit.

Cora saw that both Wanda and David were suffering as much as she herself with the tension of the situation. Wanda had said that the moment the pageant was over a theatrical engagement would take her to London by the first steamer. David spoke of a vacation in Bermuda with Cora as soon as the pageant made it possible for them to leave leave. But there was a month to the day of the pageant. And this month Cora determined to spend in her solitary visit to New York.

She told David and Wanda only part of her reasons for the trip to her home city. But they understood the rest as clearly as though she had used words. Also they understood the crisis as well as she, though not a word passed among the three on what lay most heavily on their hearts.

"I am coming back on the day of the pageant, dear," Cora said to David and Wanda as her train was about to pull out. "And if everything turns out well we'll rejoice. If not," she smiled pluckily, "if not—why, they'll take things as bravely as we can."

Rose Brett, who was going to New York on the same train, overheard these words and wondered why Cora should look serious, almost tragic, about the success of the pageant.

EMBROIDERY WEAR.

When the hand-embroidered lingerie begins to give and pull out around the edges of the bodice and under the brodered places, do not throw it away or attempt to piece it underneath. Baste a piece of tissue beneath the worn or torn place, and with cotton floss, add on to the original design to cover the wear. A leaf or two, a tendril or flower, will look as if it belonged to the pattern. Often the plain cloth of an embroidered garment remains firm while the embroidered part wears, due to the fact that the heavy embroidery pulls on the cloth around it. This method will add weeks to its wearing qualities.

PRESERVING MEAT.

To preserve meat in hot weather, wash it over with very weak vinegar and water, then cover with slices of raw onion. Before cooking, remove the onion and rinse the meat in clear cold water.

TO ICE PASTRY.

For fruit tarts and sweet dishes of pastry, put the white of an egg on a plate and beat it to a stiff froth. When the pastry is nearly baked, brush it over with this and sift over some powdered sugar. Put it back into the oven to set the glaze, and in a few minutes it will be done.

Great care should be taken that the paste does not catch or burn in the oven, which it is very likely to do after the icing is laid on.

ANTS.

A good way to get rid of ants is to sprinkle pepper where the ants are. If they are in the jelly, sprinkle some pepper around the jelly or take a piece of jelly out and sprinkle pepper around it.

ACHES AND PAINS

Don't neglect a pain anywhere, but find out what causes it and conquer the cause. A pain in the kidney region may put you on your back tomorrow. Don't blame the weather for swollen feet, it may be an advance warning of Bright's disease. A pain in the stomach may be the first symptom of appendicitis. A creak in a joint may be the forerunner of rheumatism. Chronic headaches move the likely warning you of serious stomach trouble. BAPTIST WORKERS' OPEN CONVENTION

Salt Lake, July 31.—Salt Lake is the meeting place selected by the Baptist general workers of the Pacific and central division of the denomination. Already the state superintendents and general missionaries of the Pacific coast division are in the city, having opened their conference Saturday at the Newhouse hotel.

Tuesday, when all from the central states shall have arrived, a four-day conference on evangelism will be held. Following this, the workers from the central states will hold their district conference.

Yesterday the various Baptist pulpits of the city were occupied by the visitors. At the Immanuel, Superintendent of Evangelism Dr. W. B. Hinson of Portland preached both morning and evening, the latter service being a union meeting of all the Baptists in the city. Dr. Hinson is a gospel preacher of extraordinary ability and helpfulness, and a large number took advantage of the opportunity to hear him.

The Rev. F. R. Margetts of the east Washington and northern Idaho convention preached in the Burlington church, and Dr. J. F. Watson of the southern California convention filled the pulpit of the Bethel church. The Rev. W. H. Bowler of the Idaho-Utah convention went to Provo and the Rev. A. H. Bailey, Los Angeles, spoke in the Ogden Baptist church.

The visitors are all enjoying themselves and are delighted with Salt Lake. The Rev. Mr. Bronson is arranging to give them an auto trip of the city and environs this afternoon.

Those who are already here are: State superintendents—Arizona, T. F. McCourney, Phoenix; northern California, C. W. Brainard, Berkeley; southern California, J. F. Watson, Los Angeles; Oregon, O. C. Wright, Portland; Nevada, G. F. Gardner, Reno; west Washington, J. H. Beaven; east Washington, F. R. Margetts, Spokane; Utah-Idaho, W. H. Bowler, Boise; assistant superintendent, southern California, A. H. Bailey, Los Angeles; general superintendents—Dr. C. A. Woody, Portland, Pacific division; Dr. Bruce Knney, Topeka, Midland division; Dr. W. B. Hinson, Portland, superintendent of evangelism, western division. The secretaries from the Dakotas, Nebraska, Kansas, Colorado and Wyoming are yet to arrive.

GRASSHOPPER RUSH INTO CLOVER FIELDS

Twin Falls, Idaho, July 30.—Lack of preparedness against an invasion of grasshoppers in southern Idaho will probably result in a serious loss to farmers having closer fields. Every drug store in the county has orders filled for from 500 to 1000 pounds of sodium arsenate for spraying clover fields, but the supply is completely exhausted.

WILSON'S NOTE ON THE BLACKLIST

Declares Act Carries Serious Consequences to Citizens of Neutral Nations.

Washington, July 30.—Great Britain is warned in the American note of protest against the blacklist, made public tonight by the state department, of the "many serious consequences to neutral rights and neutral relations which such an act must necessarily involve."

Already in the hands of the British foreign office, the note says, in the gravest terms, that it is "manifestly out of the question that the government of the United States should acquiesce in such methods" and that the United States regards the blacklist as "inevitably and essentially inconsistent with the rights of all their citizens of all the nations not involved in the war."

It reminds the British government that citizens of the United States are entirely within their rights in attempting to trade with the people of the governments of any of the nations now at war, subject only to well-defined international practices and understandings which the government of the United States deems the government of Great Britain has too lightly and too frequently disregarded. The American note is even more positive in its terms than officials have intimated.

Text of Note.

Ambassador Page was instructed by Acting Secretary Polk to deliver it formally and textually. It follows:

The announcement that his British majesty's government has placed the names of certain persons, firms and corporations in the United States upon a proscription "blacklist" and has forbidden all financial or commercial dealings with them, and citizens of Great Britain has been received with the most painful surprise by the people and government of the United States, and seems to the government of the United States to embody a policy of arbitrary interference with neutral trade against which it is its duty to protest in the most decided terms.

The scope and effect of the policy are extraordinary. British steamship companies will not accept cargoes from the proscribed firms or persons or transport their goods to any port, and steamship lines under neutral ownership understand that if they accept freight from them they are likely to be denied coal at British ports and excluded from other privileges which they have usually enjoyed, and may themselves be put on the blacklist.

Bankers Are Afraid.

Neutral bankers refuse to answer to those on the list, and neutral merchants decline to contract for their goods, fearing a like proscription. It appears that British officials regard the prohibition of the blacklist as applicable to domestic commercial transactions in foreign countries as well as in Great Britain and her dependencies, for Americans doing business in foreign countries have been put on notice that their dealings are to be regarded as subject to veto by the British government.

By the same principle Americans in the United States might be made subject to similar punitive action if they are found dealing with any of their own countrymen whose names had thus been listed.

The harsh and eventually disastrous effects of this policy upon the trade of the United States and upon the neutral rights upon which it will not fail to insist are obvious. Upon the list of those proscribed and in effect shut out from the general commerce of the world may be found American concerns which are engaged in large commercial operations as importers of foreign products and materials, and as distributors of American products and manufactures to foreign countries, and which consists of important channels through the American trade reaches the wide world.

Their former affiliations may have been fostered for many years, and when once broken cannot easily or promptly be re-established. Other concerns may be put upon the list at any time and without notice. It is understood that additions to the proscription may be made "whether on account of enemy nationality or enemy association of such person or bodies of persons when it appears to his majesty's government expedient to do so." The possibilities of undesired injury to American citizens from such measures, arbitrarily taken, and of serious and incalculable interruptions of American trade are without limit.

It has been stated on behalf of his majesty's government that these measures were aimed only at the enemies of Great Britain and would be adopted and enforced with strict regard to the rights of neutrals and with the least possible detriment to neutral trade, but it is evident that they are inevitable and essentially inconsistent with the rights of the citizens of all the nations not involved in war.

The government of the United States begs to remind the government of his majesty that citizens of the United States are entirely within their rights in attempting to trade with the people or he government of any of the nations now at war, subject only to well-defined international practices and understandings which the government of the United States deems the government of Great Britain too lightly and too frequently disregards.

Penalties for Disregard.

There are well known remedies and penalties for breaches of blockade where the blockade is real, and, in fact, effective, for trade in contraband, for every unneutral act by whomsoever attempted.

The government of the United States cannot consent to see those remedies and penalties altered or extended at the will of a single power or group of powers to the injury of its own citizens or in derogation of its own rights. Consistent among the principles which the civilized nations of the world have accepted for the safeguarding of the rights of neutrals is the just and honorable principle that neutrals may not be condemned nor their goods confiscated except upon fair adjudication and after an opportunity to be heard in prize courts or elsewhere. Such safeguards the blacklist brushes aside. It condemns without hearing, without notice and in advance.

It is manifestly out of the question that the government of the United States should acquiesce in such methods as applications of punishment to its citizens.

Inconsistent With Justice. Whatever may be said in regard to the legality in the view of international obligations of the act of parliament upon which the practice of the blacklist as now employed by his majesty's government is understood to be based, the government of the United States is constrained to regard that practice as inconsistent with that fine justice, sincere amity, and impartial fairness which should characterize the dealings of friendly governments with one another.

The spirit of reciprocal trade between the United States and Great Britain, the privilege long accorded to the nationals of each to come and go with their ships and cargoes, to use each other's shipping and serve each by the other's merchants is very seriously impaired by arbitrary and sweeping practices such as this.

There is no purpose of inclination on the part of the government of the United States to shield American citizens or business houses in any way from the legitimate consequences of unneutral acts or practices; it is quite willing that they should suffer the appropriate penalties which international law and the usage of nations have sanctioned; but his Britannic majesty's government cannot expect the government of the United States to consent to see its citizens put on an ex parte blacklist without calling the attention of his majesty's government, in the gravest terms, to the many serious consequences to neutral rights and neutral relations which such an act must necessarily involve. It hopes and believes that his majesty's government, in its natural absorption in a single pressing object of policy, has acted without a full realization of the many undesired and undesirable results that might ensue.
